DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1, 5-8, 9, 13-16, 17, 21-24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Reinemann (PG Pub US 2003/0115118 A1).

As per claim 1, Reinemann discloses a method for throttling data transfer, comprising; determining an amount of resources that are in use; (paragraph 11)

When the amount of resources reaches a high threshold, notifying one or more primary control units to temporarily stop sending data; and (paragraphs 13, 25, 35)

When the amount of resources reaches a low threshold, notifying each previously notified primary control unit to resume sending data. (paragraph 21)

As per claim 5, Reinemann discloses the method of claim 1, wherein at least one of the resources is a cache (paragraph 11)

As per claim 6, Reinemann discloses the method of claim 1, wherein the amount is measured by a percentage (paragraph 16)

As per claim 7, Reinemann discloses the method of claim 1, wherein the one or more primary control units that are notified to temporarily stop sending data are selected based on an amount of resources being used by each primary control unit (paragraph 16)

As per claim 8, Reinemann discloses the method of claim 7, further comprising maintaining information on the amount of resources being used by each primary control unit (paragraph 11, 16)

As per claims 9, 13-16, 17, 21-24 the examiner finds these claims differ from the above rejected claims only in statutory category. The same arguments used in rejection of the above claims are applicable in rejection of these claims.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 2, 10, and 18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Reinemann as applied to claims 1, 5-8 above, and further in view of applicant's admitted prior art.

In description of the related art submitted by the applicant discloses a method for throttling data transfer, wherein all primary control units are notified to temporarily stop sending data. (Figure 1; page 2, lines 8-15)

Applicant's description of prior art and Reinemann's invention are from the same field of shared resources management.

At the time of invention, it would have been obvious for a person of ordinary skill in the art to combine prior art described by the applicant and Reinemann's invention because it would allow Reinemann's system to notify all primary control units to stop sending data when resources are fully utilized and therefore incapable of handling additional requests.

As per claims 10 and 18 the examiner finds these claims differ from the above rejected claims only in statutory category. The same arguments used in rejection of the above claims are applicable in rejection of these claims.

5. Claims 3-4, 11-12, 19-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Reinemann as applied to claims 1-2, 5-10, 13-18, 21-24 above, and further in view of Wong (PG Pub US 2004/0003069 A1).

As per claim 3, Reinemann does not disclose expressly the method of claim 1, further comprising: at a primary control unit, resuming sending data after a predetermined period of time has expired without receipt of notification to resume sending data.

Wong discloses at a primary control unit, resuming sending data after a predetermined period of time has expired without receipt of notification to resume sending data (paragraph 56)

As per claim 4, Reinemann does not disclose expressly the method of claim 1, further comprising: when the amount of resources used is above a final threshold, re-notifying the one or more primary control units to temporarily stop sending data.

Wong discloses when the amount of resources used is above a final threshold, re-notifying the one or more primary control units to temporarily stop sending data.

Reinemann's invention and Wong's invention are from the analogous art of shared-resource management and flow control in a computer system.

At the time of the invention, it would have been obvious for a person of ordinary skill to combine Wong's invention with Reinemann's invention by adding Wong's flow control algorithm to Reinemann's resource management system.

The motivation for doing so would have been to further reduce or eliminate congestion during transfer of data while providing flexibility to the system.

As per claims 11-12 and 19-20 the examiner finds these claims differ from the above rejected claims only in statutory category. The same arguments used in rejection of the above claims are applicable in rejection of these claims.
